TVF&R Launches a Blog

Tualatin Valley Fire and Rescue now has a blog. The website, located at <http://blog.tvfr.com> is designed to be a place for the public to learn the latest about what's new with TVF&R.

“We hope TV&R’s new blog is a place for the public and the media to keep up to date on everything from incident information to safety tips,” says TVF&R Communications Officer Brian Barker, “it’s a behind the scenes look at the District.”

The goal of this visually exciting platform is to highlight current incidents, showcase TVF&R’s people and programs, and educate the community. The blog is a real-time, frequently updated look at what’s happening right now.

Tualatin Valley Fire and Rescue still maintains its primary website, <http://tvfr.com>, as an in-depth source of news, information and background about the District.

“We hope people check it often,” Barker says, “because it will be updated frequently and give the public a great new insight into TVF&R’s services and programs.”
